

The level of water in a lake depends on the balance between four things:

- How much rain and snow falls directly into the lake
- How much water evaporates from the surface of the lake
- How much water comes into the lake from rivers and groundwater springs
- How much water goes out of the lake in rivers or groundwater seepage